Best Restaurants

When we at Murfreesboro Magazine started planning our annual restaurant issue, it made sense to ask local restaurant expert Barb Ford to define the best places to spend your evening out dollars at this moment. "When someone asks me where I eat in Murfreesboro, I generally reply 'at home,'" Ford jokes, as only a food writer can. We asked her to name eight places worth eating out in the city, and she provided a list that's timely, fun and diverse. Here's Barb's take on what you should be eating and why:

"When Murfreesboro Magazine asks me to choose just eight restaurants to write about, I think of too many too count. So, given this assignment, I chose to focus on eight restaurants I enjoy, each for vastly different reasons. Below, find a collection of options, from where to get a great, hearty breakfast, to fine dining, to adventuresome dining with an ethnic twist. Enjoy!"

Demos' Restaurant:

Demos' is one of Murfreesboro's most reliable favorites. Their baked chicken soup has been comforting families since 1989. While you may have to wait on a table, you can be sure your service will be fast and courteous. This is one place that satisfies with many entrees under $10 and daily specials that are truly bargain meals. They have something for everyone, from steaks and seafood to pastas. One classic choice is the roast half chicken, crispy and golden with spices but still moist and juicy inside—it is large and luscious enough to satisfy any appetite. A new feature is Demos' "Pans To Go", including a large pan of pasta or chicken, rolls and soup or salad for $36—an easy, delicious alternative to cooking dinner at home.
